When high school students plan their school trips, some choose to travel within their own country, and others want to go abroad. There are other choices, too. These days, more students prefer going overseas for their school trips.

What are the reasons for this? Some students want to explore new places and see things they have never seen before. Other students are excited to try foods from different cultures and learn about new ways of life. Because of this, they believe traveling abroad will be an unforgettable adventure.

On the other hand, some students are worried about the language barrier and getting lost in a foreign country. This can be scary and stressful. Some students are also concerned about the cost of traveling overseas. As a result, they feel that planning a school trip abroad might be too challenging and expensive.
